

KForce Bad Breath System - Product Review

1. Dr Harry Marget, East Bentleigh Dental Group, Melbourne

My interest started with an article I saw that stated there was research being done on bad breath; shortly after which I saw a TV presentation on this done by the Sydney group headed by Dr Geoffrey Speiser.

Whats Good About It

What impressed me was the research, the scientific approach taken by Dr Speiser and also the careful manner in which it was presented. What really impressed me was how well it was received by the general public, and how it enhanced my business - it actually folds really well into the general run of a family-orientated practice. The major hiccup is how little the public knows about dental hygiene, and also how little they know about related sinus conditions and other nasties. But having dealt with that, all is smooth sailing. One needs to be vigilant and check each patient carefully, but the package that Dr Speiser supplies really is faultless because each step is covered, and his personal knowledge is there to be seen. We see a big future for this product and, like in our office, have no hesitation using and recommending it.

What's Not So Good

Perhaps the only enhancement will be more on the sinus and upper respiratory tract issues. What shocked me was that a lot of people simply did not understand the simple but extensive rules to using it - and how few knew how to brush and floss. So overcoming these obstacles was the big problem, and once that was done it has been a boon to have here.

2. Dr Brett Taylor, Leading Edge Dental, Penshurst, NSW

My wife (the lawyer) found this product for me. She was flicking through a dental magazine and read an article on probiotic bacteria by Professor John Tagg. You'd think she'd have better things to do, but given the fact most of my lay friends ask her for dental advice at parties instead of me (much to my annoyance), I guess she feels she has to keep up.

Anyway, my marital disputes aside, the KForce concept is pretty simple; remove the bacteria that causes bad breath and replace it with bacteria that doesn't. Now most dentists think bad breath just comes from untreated periodontal disease, but that isn't true. There are plenty of disease-free people out there with bad breath. The patients know it, but for years we dentists have just brushed their concerns away. Sydney dentist Dr Geoffrey Speiser was listening though, and has developed a system of products that really does eliminate bad breath.

Whats Good About It

That's easy. It really does work.

What's Not So Good

Try the product yourself. If you don't currently think half the people you meet have bad breath, then it probably means you do. Ask me how I figured that out.
